My path has not been determined. I shall have more experiences and pass many more milestones.

~Agnetha Faltskog

There was a time when the music fell silent. Both within me and around me.

~Agnetha Faltskog

There is a danger of changing too much in the search for perfection.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I'm a country bumpkin. I'm not a showgirl.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I can spot empty flattery and know exactly where I stand. In the end it's really only my own approval or disapproval that means anything.

~Agnetha Faltskog

The press has always written that I am a recluse and a mysterious woman, but I am more down-to-earth than they think.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I have one pug and one Czechoslovakian dog called Prazsky krysarik.

~Agnetha Faltskog

When I record, it feels like I'm in a bubble. There's nothing else in my head right then. It's just that song, and I'm trying to really sound like what the song is about.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I just want to live in peace and quiet.

~Agnetha Faltskog

It's strange that the newspapers don't see a connection between their false revelations about my private life and my need for seclusion and security.

~Agnetha Faltskog

No one who has experienced facing a screaming, boiling, hysterical audience can avoid feeling shivers in the spine. It's a thin line between celebration and menace.

~Agnetha Faltskog

My life contains so many other things; I have my children, my grandchildren, my two dogs and a big place in the country. I have my own life.

~Agnetha Faltskog

When I was 15 I became a full-time singer in a band. At 18 I made my first record.

~Agnetha Faltskog

Abba's last tour was a success but awful for me.

~Agnetha Faltskog

When you love someone, and you've lost that one, then nothing really matters.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I must be allowed to be as I am.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I may have aimed too high sometimes, asked too much of myself and demanded too little from those around me.

~Agnetha Faltskog

When I was 25, Abba was formed. After Abba I made three solo albums. Maybe I have been productive enough.

~Agnetha Faltskog

My professional persona never loosens its grip, keeping an eye on me at all times.

~Agnetha Faltskog

I would like to sing the theme tune of a big film - something like 'Titanic'.
