There's nothing so kingly as kindness, And nothing so royal as truth.

~Alice Cary

Coldly and capriciously the slanting sunbeams fall.

~Alice Cary

Even for the dead I will not bind my soul to grief, death cannot long divide; for is it not as if the rose that climbed my garden wall had bloomed the other side?

~Alice Cary

Every life is meant to help all lives; each man should live for all men's betterment.

~Alice Cary

How many lives we live in one, And how much less than one, in all.

~Alice Cary

My soul is full of whispered song,-My blindness is my sight;The shadows that I feared so longAre full of life and light.

~Alice Cary

Women and men in the crowd meet and mingle, Yet with itself every soul standeth single.

~Alice Cary

Shut up the door: who loves me must not look / Upon the withered world, but haste to bring / His lighted candle, and his story-book, / And live with me the poetry of spring.

~Alice Cary

He who loves best his fellow-man, is loving God the holiest way he can.

~Alice Cary

Yea, when mortality dissolves, Shall I not meet thine hour unawed? My house eternal in the heavens Is lighted by the smile of God!

~Alice Cary

Nothing in this low and ruined world bears the meek impress of the Son of God so surely as forgiveness.

~Alice Cary

I hold that a man had better be dead than alive when his work is done.

~Alice Cary

True worth is in being, not seeming

~Alice Cary

There must be room for penitence to mend Life's broken chance; else noise of wars would unmake heaven.

~Alice Cary

We serve Him most who take the most of His exhaustless love.

~Alice Cary

I sit where the leaves of the maple and the gnarled and knotted gum are circling and drifting around me.

~Alice Cary

We cannot make bargains for blisses, / Nor catch them like fishes in nets; / And sometimes the thing our life misses, / Helps more than the thing which it gets.

~Alice Cary

For he who is honest is noble, Whatever his fortunes or birth.

~Alice Cary

Not what we think, but what we do, / Makes saints of us: all stiff and cold, / The outlines of the corpse show through / The cloth of gold.

~Alice Cary

I hold that Christian grace abounds Where charity is seen; that when
We climb to heaven, 'tis on the rounds Of love to men.

~Alice Cary

The attempt is all the wedge that splits its knotty way betwixt the impossible and possible.
