There was an old lady who lived in a shoe. She had so many kids... her uterus fell out!

~Andrew Dice Clay

When you jerk off, you're saying "Hey", I care about me.

~Andrew Dice Clay

If it smells like fish its a dish. If it smells like cologne leave it alone.

~Andrew Dice Clay

Little Boy Blue... he needed the money!

~Andrew Dice Clay

Don't most men actually think that the more money they spend on a date, the more fingers they get to stick in your pussy before they kiss you goodnight?

~Andrew Dice Clay

Life is like sex, baby - the more you put in, the more you get out. End of story.

~Andrew Dice Clay

Whether you're gay, straight, you can't tell anybody who to love and who to marry. It's unconstitutional and it's morally wrong.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I think the best part of being gay is when you're done [with sex], you could turn over and talk about football.

~Andrew Dice Clay

If you hide what you really are, then there's going to be problems in marriage down the road. I don't mind if a girl is aggressive. It's just sex.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I always just loved women, but more important than loving women, more important than sexual stuff, is I always believed in romance.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I've been getting in trouble my whole life and I really don't care what anybody thinks of what I do on stage as a comic.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I'll always push myself because that's the journey of life. We do go through things. Some of it's incredibly great and some of it's really bad.

~Andrew Dice Clay

Even as a stage performer, I have my garb which is leather jackets and black jeans to make me feel a certain way. The wardrobe is really important to feeling the character you're playing.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I might do cartoonish sexual jokes, but it's my way of saying what's going on in the world. How people are animals, really.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I have no problem today letting people know I'm part of what they live. That's why I know about the things that make people the assholes they are. They have no choice but to be part of it.

~Andrew Dice Clay

If Lady Gaga didn't put on all those outfits, she probably wouldn't have made it in show business. She put a show behind her voice.

~Andrew Dice Clay

The whole world has changed, so you just stay current with the world. There's nothing different in my language of how I say things.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I'm a Brooklyn guy onstage, and I try to really feed my fans with the kind of material they expect from me.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I want to be able to make people laugh as hard as they possibly can, and I really think they need that.

~Andrew Dice Clay

You walk into my bedroom at night, it looks like a nightclub. There's all kinds of lighting effects, there's all kinds of music. I want them to feel like they're in for a show. I believe in romance.

~Andrew Dice Clay

Comics, a lot of them, are really depressed people, and I happen to be somebody that does have a lot of confidence. That's the odd thing about my stand-up. I am very confident. I always was.

~Andrew Dice Clay

There are very few comics that understand about exciting the crowd, and that's what I always prided myself on: giving a more confident macho attitude towards delivering material.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I certainly don't walk around my home or being with my family and just using profane language all the time, but on stage, it's a constant.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I've always had my voice as a comic. I was never that into politics, or prop comedy.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I just like to make people laugh.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I like when something makes you think after you stop watching.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I never became a recluse where I got away from people and who they are and how they think. I'm very much in touch with the world.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I never go see a comic. The only one I'd ever really want to see is Don Rickles. He might be 80 years old, but he blows everyone out of the water.

~Andrew Dice Clay

Being onstage and performing, the high of that, and people coming to see you, and getting to make them laugh - that's what gets me hyped up. It's a nervous excitement.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I like real girls. When they're in bed with you, it's not a show. They just want to do that.

~Andrew Dice Clay

People have always been animals when it comes to sex. But since the Internet, it's become really out of control, in my opinion.

~Andrew Dice Clay

When I do any stand-up, you're the writer, director, and producer. You're alone.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I loved my family so much when I was growing up, my parents, my sister. I wanted to be able to give them everything they ever dreamed of.

~Andrew Dice Clay

I always believed you could fix whatever problems.
