Cinema can transform pain and trauma into something beautiful.

~Anna Biller

What I like about the '60s movies was that they were about women. They were telling women's stories. I think a lot of movies don't tell women's stories anymore.

~Anna Biller

I've always loved movies dealing with the terror of a woman who doesn't really know her husband and finds out that he's a monster. It's one of my favorite plots.

~Anna Biller

When men create movies about femme fatales, it really is always about how that female can destroy that male. It's not really about what's happening on the interior of that female.

~Anna Biller

Men's requirements of women are impossible and ridiculous and so destructive.

~Anna Biller

I feel like that's how women feel in a way. You can get paranoid because everyone actually is a conspiracy to diminish your power.

~Anna Biller

Anything anybody's used, a comb, a lock of hair, a drop of sweat, anything that comes from somebody's body has incredible magical power.

~Anna Biller

Every time I get criticism from people, I learn from it and what to do the next time so there are fewer misconceptions. I'm continuing to be socialized as a woman, but also as a filmmaker.

~Anna Biller

The more that I see the sexism and misogyny that's coming at me from every direction, the less I think my films have anything to do with exploitation.

~Anna Biller

I think glamour is a female thing. I don't think that's a male fantasy. I think glamour's a female fantasy.

~Anna Biller

We women have gained so many more things, but we lost that kind of sexual power, the glamour power. We still love women who can still do that in culture.

~Anna Biller

I think women love glamour. I mean, not all women, but I think this is something that women share.
