The more we reduce ourselves to machines in the lower things, the more force we shall set free to use in the higher.

~Anna Brackett

We go on multiplying our conveniences only to multiply our cares. We increase our possessions only to the enlargement of our anxieties.

~Anna Brackett

Do not seek for information of which you cannot make use.

~Anna Brackett

We are always getting ready to live, and never having time enough to live.

~Anna Brackett

There are perhaps only one or two things in the world which are not far more charming in desire than they are in possession.

~Anna Brackett

He who receives a great many letters demanding answer, sees himself as if engaged in a hopeless struggle of one man against the rest of the world.

~Anna Brackett
