I've been acting since second grade, telling stories, making my parents laugh here and there, so I'm hoping my "thing" is acting. But I also make a really good bread pudding.

~Anna Camp

I always like to be a step ahead of the audience by surprising them and the best way to do that is to not hold back.

~Anna Camp

Well, I'm from the South originally. I grew up in South Carolina definitely learning about manners and being proper and having to go to cotillions.

~Anna Camp

I think everybody wants to be a rock star.

~Anna Camp

I went to School of the Arts in Winston-Salem, and we had a bunch of singing classes. My first job in New York was an Off-Broadway musical.

~Anna Camp

Ultimately, I don't think you can teach a tone-deaf person how to sing. Some talents you're just born with, unfortunately.

~Anna Camp

Sometimes you just can't hear yourself. Maybe ears are too close to the mouth.

~Anna Camp

It's shocking when someone who is really bad thinks they're really good. It's heartbreaking, because singing is such a vulnerable thing to do.

~Anna Camp

You always envy someone else's life and, as a woman, you're always comparing your life to someone else's life.

~Anna Camp

I think that the audience wants to see women being put into real situations where they can relate to them, rather than seeing some glamorous woman in a 'Bond' film.

~Anna Camp

I'm a huge fan of Jessica Lange and 'American Horror Story.' I would love to work with her. She's been one of my favorite actresses for a while.

~Anna Camp

In the South, you don't say exactly what's going on or what's on your mind.

~Anna Camp

I went to college at North Carolina School of the Arts and took a lot of singing classes, and it really is so connected to emotions.

~Anna Camp

I started doing regional theater. My first job was "The Importance of Being Earnest" at Dallas Theater Center.
