Having it all means having the same work and family choices that men do. It doesn't mean having everything that you want. No one has that.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Only when women wield power in significant numbers will we create a society that genuinely works for all women — that will be a society that works for everyone.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

The societies that work build an infrastructure of care as well as an infrastructure of capitalism.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

In the end, no matter how much you love your work, your work will not love you back.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

If we're going to have better choices for women, we've got to have better choices for men.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Believe it or not, we will actually be better and happier workers if we are allowed to be better parents. We might even rediscover our capacity for fun.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Biological sex should not determine what we are capable of, what we aspire to, what we do in our life.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

The American work environment has to change, not the women. We should be recognizing that what women are not fitting into is a very narrow, male-dominated workplace of the 1950s.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Do not vote for Hillary [Clinton] because she is a woman. Ask yourself, who has done more for women so far and who will do more for women in the future - and then make your choice.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

The international community cannot stand by and watch the massacre of Libyan protesters. In Rwanda we watched. In Kosovo we acted.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Women still can't have it all.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Motherhood is a greater predictor of wage inequality than gender is. It's enormous.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

My husband has spent more time with our children than I have. I don't think they're better or worse off.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

In foreign policy, even if you hold high office, you can't be sure what the effects will be of the things you do.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

I am still fully committed to male-female equality.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

I am convinced that this country is ready to have a woman in the White House, but I also think there's still a lot of hidden sexism.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

We all love narratives where we're the captain of our boat, and Americans love them more than anybody else.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Our approach [to global security] has changed by the way we've elevated development. The biggest lesson is to recognize global responsibility.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

Patriotism demands the ability to feel shame as much as to feel pride.

~Anne-Marie Slaughter

I very much admire Sheryl Sandberg for what she has done. I really do. But Sandberg's narrative also implies: "Well, it's your fault if you couldn't make it." There is a certain injustice in that.
