She understood. They were plastic flowers of wordsâ€”but they looked nice on the surface.

~Anne Ursu

This is what it is to live in the world. You have to give yourself over to the cold, at least a little bit.

~Anne Ursu

In woods where the woodsmen told lies, maybe it was the wolves who told the truth.

~Anne Ursu

Her father said she was a princess. He did not see that she was a brave knight.

~Anne Ursu

It snowed right before Jack stopped talking to Hazel, fluffy white flakes big enough to show their crystal architecture, like perfect geometric poems.

~Anne Ursu

Kids can handle a lot more than you think they can. It's when they get to be grown up that you have to start worrying.

~Anne Ursu

Sometimes superheroes are born, sometimes they are made. Sometimes they make themselves. Sometimes all it takes is will.
