In a quantum universe, magic is not the exception but the rule.

~Arjuna Ardagh

However beautifully you play the violin, you can always play the violin even more beautifully again.

~Arjuna Ardagh

They see that who they are is the silence in which sound is happening, the spaciousness in which movement occurs. This kind of recognition, whether fleeting or abiding, is called an awakening.

~Arjuna Ardagh

I enjoy spending time with other awakened people and feeling the shared vibration of that, whereas just fun for its own sake might no longer be quite so enticing as it used to be.

~Arjuna Ardagh

However much your life may have become an expression of creativity, of generosity of spirit, there's always the further possibility of more or just expressing it in different ways.

~Arjuna Ardagh

Whenever we release our need to be right about everything as parents, we are able to meet our children in a relationship of mutuality and respect.

~Arjuna Ardagh

The translucent revolution is not only about more and more people having awakening, it's also about the way that awakening is embodied "and that's much more revolutionary, actually."

~Arjuna Ardagh

There were statistically more women than men on the planet. Why should every major religion have been founded by men and propagated by men?

~Arjuna Ardagh

The translucent life is very much about overflowing with a gift to the world, rather than being here to consume or to get something for yourself.

~Arjuna Ardagh

A translucent person appears to glow as if from the inside. It's as though they've been lit up from inside and they appear to emit light.

~Arjuna Ardagh

Once we meet our children, even for moments, in a place of "I don't know," of relinquished authority, we return to the realms of mystery and magic, where real connection becomes alive again.

~Arjuna Ardagh

Masculine people, by their nature, tend to want to make everything into a journey with a goal.

~Arjuna Ardagh

Awakening is usually precipitated by the honest, sincere, inquiry into who you really are.

~Arjuna Ardagh

I think the myths are keeping us limited to, and tied to, what I would call the hyper-masculine tradition. All the major religions in the world have been founded by men and propagated by men.

~Arjuna Ardagh

However much you may have expressed love through your life, you can always express love more.

~Arjuna Ardagh

What was considered a peak mystical experience a few years ago is today the basic platform of sanity from which our exploration begins.

~Arjuna Ardagh

The Iago trance is a state that we've really come to accept as normal, even if we may not feel it to be natural.

~Arjuna Ardagh

The most important thing about translucent people is that their life has been deeply transformed by an awakening.

~Arjuna Ardagh

My own awakening came in 1991 and my teacher then, in India, asked me to return to the West and to share this kind of inquiry.

~Arjuna Ardagh

I don't think there is any end to translucence. It's an endless journey, rather like playing the violin.

~Arjuna Ardagh

Most of the myths that we carry about spirituality are because we have been dominated by this hyper-masculine trance.
