I've always liked the classic "young adult" writers like Mark Twain, Jack London, Roald Dahl, Charles Dickens. They write so clearly, and they know how to entertain.

~Arthur Bradford

I'm not very disciplined. I tend to write late at night because I get distracted during the day.

~Arthur Bradford

I'm just a dog person. I love dogs very much, especially big ones, hounds, and retrievers. I think they are funny and often have good senses of humor. Plus, they give unconditional love.

~Arthur Bradford

I have two dogs myself and they are always around when I write, so they tend to creep in there.

~Arthur Bradford

I like people who lead unusual lives, and very often a person with a disability fits into that category.

~Arthur Bradford

I wanted to do a collection where the narrator is constant throughout, so that there's a little unity.

~Arthur Bradford

I'm trying to write stories that are interesting and enjoyable.

~Arthur Bradford

I want the situations and plots to be surprising and unusual.

~Arthur Bradford

I know that some of the things which happen in these stories are not likely, but sometimes I wonder if they are not possible in some way.

~Arthur Bradford

I've found that I seek out oddballs; I like strange and eccentric people a lot.

~Arthur Bradford

Sometimes the autobiographical link in each story is very literal, like I did work at The Texas School for the Blind, and I did once lose a mattress out of the back of a friend's truck.

~Arthur Bradford

I was living in a house with 11 dogs and all I thought about was dogs. I never had sex with any of them though.

~Arthur Bradford

I chose the title Dogwalker because that describes me pretty well. I spend a lot of time walking around with my dogs. I'd say the narrator is me in an alternate universe.
