I hope to be on the scene for a long time. I'd love to be old and gray and still be working in this [horror] genre.

~Barbara Crampton

I feel like Travis [Stevens] is just a Midas touch producer. Seemingly everything he touches turns to gold lately, so that was quite exciting looking at that prospect.

~Barbara Crampton

I watch the energy between the actors. That's the most thrilling and interesting thing to me about watching a movie, what the actors are doing.

~Barbara Crampton

Everybody can justify their actions. We all think that we're doing things for reasons that are meaningful to us. Maybe not to other people, but to us.

~Barbara Crampton

I guess in society there's no place for women in their older thirties. We're supposed to go sit on a shelf at some point... and wait.

~Barbara Crampton

As I've matured, the roles are a bit more layered and representative of where I am today as an older person with more responsibilities, perspective and hopefully not too many regrets.

~Barbara Crampton

The people I love the most in the film industry are the writers. And I think they're the people who are most vulnerable and are really open to new ideas. They're the originators, the creators.

~Barbara Crampton

When I work with filmmakers today, I'm really an advocate for the women's roles that I see, to make them as layered and as deep as possible. I think many of them are underwritten.

~Barbara Crampton

When I work on a piece I always think if there is an abundance of male characters which one could we change to a woman or a minority character.

~Barbara Crampton

I love reading scripts and offering notes and opinions. I'd like to be an advocate for the emerging filmmakers whom I'm working with.

~Barbara Crampton

Superhero roles seem to be popular. I'd like to see more female superheroes. How about a grandmother superhero? I'd pay good money to see that.

~Barbara Crampton

When you're working with friends, I think there's a certain sensibility that you share, and it's easy to coordinate your ideas and work together to bring them in a cohesive way.
