Money and titles may be hereditary," she would say, "but brains are not,".

~Baroness Orczy

There is such wonderful balm in self-imposed sacrifice.

~Baroness Orczy

Even the worst moments and the weariest journeys must come to an end.

~Baroness Orczy

In the chain of my life, there were so many links, all of which tended towards bringing me to the fulfillment of my destiny.

~Baroness Orczy

We must prove to the world that we are all nincompoops

~Baroness Orczy

Virtue is like precious odours, most fragrant when it is crushed.

~Baroness Orczy

Thus human beings judge of one another, superficially, casually, throwing contempt on one another, with but little reason, and no charity.

~Baroness Orczy

She said nothing, and Sir Andrew, too, was silent, yet those two young people understood one another, as young people have a way of doing all the world over, and have done since the world began.

~Baroness Orczy

She, too, had worn a mask in assuming a contempt for him, whilst, as a matter of fact, she completely misunderstood him

~Baroness Orczy

Fate is usually swift when she deals a blow.

~Baroness Orczy

The weariest night, the longest day, sooner or later must perforce come to an end.

~Baroness Orczy

Odd's fish, m'dear! The man can't even tie his own cravat!

~Baroness Orczy

To love, for us men, is to clasp one woman with our arms, feeling that she lives and breathes just as we do, suffers as we do, thinks with us, loves with us, and, above all, sins with us.

~Baroness Orczy

Look at this limp cravat. And the sad state of those cuffs. I can hardly bring myself to look upon them.

~Baroness Orczy

Sink me! Your taylor's have betrayed you! T'wood serve you better to send THEM to Madam Guillotine

~Baroness Orczy

A woman's heart is such a complex problem - the owner thereof is often most incompetent to find the solution to this puzzle.

~Baroness Orczy

...but in every century, and ever since England has been what it is, an Englishman has always felt somewhat ashamed of his own emotion and of his own sympathy.

~Baroness Orczy
