The market is going to love it. The market always seems to applaud major mergers, even though the vast majority of them don't work out and don't increase shareholder value.

~Barry Ritholtz

You can blow on the dice all you want, but whether they come up seven is still a function of random luck.

~Barry Ritholtz

Never forget this simple truism: Forecasting is marketing, plain and simple.

~Barry Ritholtz

The good news is that economists are intelligent, engaging and often charming folks. The bad news is their work is often of little use to investors.

~Barry Ritholtz

Salesmen always need something to sell.

~Barry Ritholtz

This ugly duckling investment will likely need time - quarters, or even years - to blossom into a beautiful swan.

~Barry Ritholtz

If I am going to trash others for their dumb predictions, I must at least hold myself to the same sort of accountability.

~Barry Ritholtz

One thing I detest most about the financial press is the lack of accountability. All sorts of nonsense is said without penalty.

~Barry Ritholtz

Unlike cheap stocks, inexpensive asset classes have a lower chance of big drawdowns (broad asset classes don't go to zero) and a higher probability of average or better returns.

~Barry Ritholtz

Returnless risk is not how you prepare for a decent retirement.

~Barry Ritholtz

History is replete with examples of tech firms that were marginalized by new companies and technologies.

~Barry Ritholtz

Keynes vs Hayek? Friedman vs Krugman? Those are the wrong intellectual debates. Its you vs. Tony Hayward, BP CEO, You vs. Lloyd Blankfein, Goldman Sachs CEO. And you are losing...
