Feminism - the word - can give us a handle, a rallying point, a common ground, and help us build a bridge. Why not claim the gift of the word as a place to begin?

~Betty Buckley

There's a lot of maintenance that goes into being a professional singer.

~Betty Buckley

The word, and the concept of feminism, was a gift because it gave me a sense of identity and a way of defining how I wished to live my life.

~Betty Buckley

I was hugely relieved to discover there was a purpose for girls with loud voices.

~Betty Buckley

I love Mary Chapin Carpenter songs. I love her songs 'Come On, Come On' and 'I Am A Town', they're two of my favorite songs.

~Betty Buckley

Everything good that I know was taught to me by great teachers and I feel like giving back and sharing the technique is the thing to do.

~Betty Buckley

Good performance is about the capacity to focus and concentrate.

~Betty Buckley

When there's an opportunity to do more, we must.

~Betty Buckley

It's just a little ranch. Thirty-five acres. In Texas, if it's not a thousand acres, it's considered a ranchette.

~Betty Buckley

The pure connecting factor is that those of us who describe ourselves as feminists want equal rights for all people.

~Betty Buckley

I have never experienced racism in the feminist movement, so it concerned me to think that I was unable to see the subject clearly because I came from white, middle-class privilege.

~Betty Buckley

If we're for one another, we're feminists. The rest is semantics.

~Betty Buckley

We can't compare stories. We can only know in our hearts that we are the same. That may be the best we can do.

~Betty Buckley

Our stories are different; our pain is the same.

~Betty Buckley

As you get older, your voice changes, as well. Your voice should be able to last as long as you last.

~Betty Buckley

Usually, I fly in the day before a concert so your voice can acclimate to the new environment.

~Betty Buckley

My two great loves are music and horses.

~Betty Buckley

For one thing, I teach my students what my teacher for twenty years, Paul Gavert, told me, 'The voice follows... the voice follows everything about you... who you are.'

~Betty Buckley
