I was always amazed at how beautiful the light was. At different times of the day the landscape becomes a different place. Dawn and dusk, it's a different place.

~Bill Henson

You spend your whole life trapped inside your body. Everything you know about the world comes to you through your body.

~Bill Henson

It just struck me that one of the things about photography that made it such a compelling medium to deal with is that it is perhaps the most contradictory of mediums.

~Bill Henson

What happens with experiences that really move us deeply, that really effect us? They make the world new again. What it does is it heightens our sense of mortality.

~Bill Henson

On practical level I can't pick up the camera until I think I know what I want. I don't wander around. It's almost impossible for me to pick up a camera... it's really hard.

~Bill Henson

Most of life is grey, with a little tiny bit of black and white.

~Bill Henson

You pick up a camera because something has been revealed to you in the landscape or in the human-scape. And you have no choice because it's a gift. And it's like, oh right, I better start doing this!

~Bill Henson

There are no inherent limitations to the medium. There are just differences.

~Bill Henson

There's something about the processional nature of the architecture, of the rooms connecting rooms. It's just breathtaking.

~Bill Henson

It was the dreamscape of the suburbs that interested me.

~Bill Henson

As a boy I was obsessed with Egypt and Egyptology. I'm convinced it's not that uncommon. A lot of 10 or 12 year old boys become obsessed with Egypt. It's a bit like young girls and horses.

~Bill Henson

The world is a colony of the US. The twentieth century was the US's century.
