It's easy to gravitate toward something negative as opposed to something positive, especially if you're an outsider.

~Blake Judd

I'm not going to hide the fact that I am a happy person.

~Blake Judd

I took music theory in high school and dropped out halfway through the semester because it was ruining music for me.

~Blake Judd

I think metal draws dumb people. It's not exactly a thinking man's genre.

~Blake Judd

I know plenty of hyper-intelligent metal people, but at the same time, there's this dumbass, hardheaded, macho attitude associated with it. For younger people, it's like a succubus.

~Blake Judd

I think it's safe to say that 50% of the record buying metal community is people between the ages of 16 and 25 - people still in their teenage-angsty, early young-adult years.

~Blake Judd

As convenient as that would be to make it easier to communicate with more prolific musicians, I don't want to think of music like a math equation.

~Blake Judd

Some people are really into being music-minded and knowing all their scales and how to read music and speak the language.

~Blake Judd

I don't think in time signatures, and when I do, what I write is generally 3/4 or 4/4, the most basic, straightforward stuff. I think that comes from just not being a super-schooled musician.

~Blake Judd

It's been nice to have a band and people I'm close to that I can get that understanding from and help me realize what I want to do in my life as a musician.

~Blake Judd

When you're not putting a bunch of chemicals into everybody, people tend not to fly off the handle.

~Blake Judd

I got really tired of metal music. How do you pick what's good to sell when you're not totally into what you're listening to and marketing?

~Blake Judd

You can have the coolest job in the world, but it only seems cool until you get sick of it.

~Blake Judd

I like just having that separation between my music life and my personal life.

~Blake Judd

Hate walks hand in hand with hate, and black metal especially is a genre that is full of white power bands.

~Blake Judd

We live with the things that we do to ourselves and others in doing what we've done to ourselves.
