I have fallen into an abyss. I live in a world so curious, so strange. Of the dream that was my life, this is my nightmare.

~Camille Claudel

I am in no mood to be deceived any longer by the crafty devil and false character whose greatest pleasure is to take advantage of everyone.

~Camille Claudel

There is always something missing that torments me.

~Camille Claudel

My countrymen have commissioned a bust of the Republic. It will be placed on the fountain of my native town.

~Camille Claudel

I don't want to say anything because I know I am unable to protect you from the harm that I see.

~Camille Claudel

I tolerate my faults but not at all other people's.

~Camille Claudel

When you left on Saturday, I felt a horrible void, I saw you everywhere, on the beach, in your room, in the garden: impossible for me to get used to the idea that you had left.

~Camille Claudel

If you are nice, and keep your promise, we will be in paradise.

~Camille Claudel

Don't fear anything for your letters, they are burnt one by one and I hope you do the same with mine.

~Camille Claudel

I sleep completely naked to make me believe you are here, but when I wake up it is not the same thing. Most of all, don't deceive me with other women any more.

~Camille Claudel

Send me one hundred francs on our future deals, otherwise I will disappear in a cataclysm.

~Camille Claudel

I have all sorts of problems and feel discouraged.

~Camille Claudel

I took all my wax studies and threw them in the fire that's the way it is when something unpleasant happens to me. I take my hammer and I squash a figure.

~Camille Claudel

Last night, two men tried to force my shutters. I recognized them: they are two of Rodin's Italian models. He told them to kill me. I am in his way; he wants to get rid of me.

~Camille Claudel

I have been back in Paris for two weeks. Nothing new. Life is still bitter.

~Camille Claudel

Sir Rodin convinced my parents to have me committed; they are all in Paris to arrange it.

~Camille Claudel

Madhouses are houses made on purpose to cause suffering . . . I cannot stand any longer the screams of these creatures.

~Camille Claudel

I would have preferred to be successful here with a piece that cost me a huge amount of money and effort... rather than sending to Bohemia some ordinary works.

~Camille Claudel

I have had the problem of seeing my male model go to Italy and... stay there.

~Camille Claudel
