“He often envied people who hadn't read his favourite books. They had such happiness before them.

~Charles Finch

When you're my age, you'll see that it is wiser to make your own decisions than let time make decisions for you.

~Charles Finch

It had been a perfect nap - the sort a man runs into now and again by chance.

~Charles Finch

Her strength was in the integrity of her actions; she never compromised what she believed she ought to do.

~Charles Finch

My ambition is to one day shed my wardrobe and figure out how to look like Gilles Bensimon - or a famous stylist - who travels with a Birkin bag and minimal accoutrement and somehow looks cool.

~Charles Finch

The two things, love and snow, that make the world look fresh again

~Charles Finch

Like everyone I slipped into adulthood like a delinquent through the back door.

~Charles Finch

There's nowhere that life feels more eternal, your dimwit youth more important, than Paris.

~Charles Finch

When I was younger I always had a dark navy, black tie and everybody would look at me like it was odd, but now it is de rigueur. I'm sure it's my input.
