In taking revenge upon our enemies, we are only even with them; in passing over their malice we are superior.

~Charlotte Lennox

What is called liberality is often no more than the vanity of giving, of which some persons are fonder than of what they give.

~Charlotte Lennox

A hero in one age will be a hero in another.

~Charlotte Lennox

When a person is found less guilty than he is suspected, he is concluded more innocent than he really is.

~Charlotte Lennox

We are better deceived by having some truth told us than none.

~Charlotte Lennox

The life of a good man is a continual prayer.

~Charlotte Lennox

No woman is envious of another's virtue who is conscious of her own.

~Charlotte Lennox

There is no logic like the logic of the heart.

~Charlotte Lennox

It is more important to detect corruption than fiction.

~Charlotte Lennox

Politeness is sometimes a great tax upon sincerity.

~Charlotte Lennox

Truth is too weak to combat prejudice.

~Charlotte Lennox

The silence of a man who loves to praise is a censure sufficiently severe.

~Charlotte Lennox

The motives even of our best actions will not always bear examination.

~Charlotte Lennox

Whatever is done by design is always overdone.

~Charlotte Lennox

Custom ... changes the very nature of things; and what was honorable a thousand years ago, may probably be looked upon as infamous now.

~Charlotte Lennox

Nothing is more common than for persons to hate those whom they have injured.

~Charlotte Lennox

Truth is not always injured by fiction.

~Charlotte Lennox

The law has no power over heroes.

~Charlotte Lennox

It is easy to be just when our own inclinations do not oppose it.

~Charlotte Lennox

When Actions are a Censure upon themselves, the Reciter will always be consider'd as a Satirist.
