I didn't really have a major role in how it was described. I wanted it to be a collection of essays where each storyline could be contained.

~Chelsea Martin

I think funniness is a sign of intelligence.

~Chelsea Martin

I like being around funny people.

~Chelsea Martin

I do think that people yearn for connection and intimacy, and that they're hard things to achieve.

~Chelsea Martin

I don't do the like, "This led to this, and this was why this happened." That doesn't feel real and isn't how I experience things.

~Chelsea Martin

That was an instance where I was given a word to define my confusing experience, and I'm just like, "nah."

~Chelsea Martin

I think I've been able to express some of the more complicated feelings I had.

~Chelsea Martin

I wanted each different Chelsea to be able to navigate her own world without having to also speak to a larger narrative.

~Chelsea Martin

My artistic process involves pens, gesso, acrylic paint, and markers, all on vellum. I use a window painter's technique and paint on the backside of my image before I mess with the front.

~Chelsea Martin

I want to draw subjects that seem very boring and everyday... Stuff that would be normal except for one thing. Or two things. Or stuff that's undeniably weird.

~Chelsea Martin

I think it's really important to have a sense of humor.

~Chelsea Martin

I love anybody funny. I think my ten-year-old sister is really funny. She makes me laugh way more than most people do.
