Do not be angry with an ungrateful person; probably they are confused or inexperienced.

~Chico Xavier

In terms of changes, the spiritual mentors teach me that I must not forget those relating primarily to improve myself.

~Chico Xavier

When we have faith and discipline everything becomes easier. Patience is the mother of all virtues. With anxiety all our lives become worse.

~Chico Xavier

Jesus Christ did not ask much from us, He did not demand that people climb Mount Everest or make great sacrifices. He just asked that we love one another.

~Chico Xavier

Do not imprison those about you to your way of thinking; give your companion the opportunity to interpret life as freely as you do.

~Chico Xavier

Help those who make mistakes; your feet walk on the same ground, and even if you possess the possibility to correct them, you have no right to censure them.

~Chico Xavier

Every little bit of peace I bring someone is worth the peace I never had.

~Chico Xavier

Avoid trouble with those who are fanatics; they remain imprisoned in exclusivism and deserve compassion just as any other prisoner.

~Chico Xavier

We need to get rid of hate, envy, jealousy, discord in ourselves, so we can reach a solution in terms of peace in order to feel that time has come for human happiness.

~Chico Xavier

Do not fret over the ignorant person; surely they have not had the opportunities which illuminated your path.

~Chico Xavier

The soul that acquires the virtue of forgiveness won't find any more trouble. No matter what happens, he will know how to run his life.

~Chico Xavier

I'm not irreplaceable ... I'm nothing but grass growing on the ground; when the grass dies, another one replaces it.

~Chico Xavier

Aid the sick; thank the Divine Power for the state of equilibrium you are able to conserve.

~Chico Xavier

Pardon the deserter; he is weak and will return to the lesson later on.

~Chico Xavier

If I would expect better spiritual conditions to serve, I would not have started until the present moment.

~Chico Xavier

Help the companion who is insecure; perhaps they do not have enough to supply their needs, while you retain an excess.

~Chico Xavier

The worker faithful to the well has neither the intention, or time, to violate the name and the service of others.

~Chico Xavier

The Master encouraged us to gain friends, that is, to expand our circle of friends through which we can feel more intensive protection in a spirit of cooperation and through intervening values.

~Chico Xavier

It is for this reason that Jesus left us the parable of the unfaithful servant, inviting us into a sincere fraternity in order that through it we could find the path of rehabilitation.

~Chico Xavier

If you pay too much attention to the criticism of the one who is inferior, then you must endure the constraints of the plane to which you have descended without feeling hurt.

~Chico Xavier

Think of your adversary as a bearer of equilibrium; if we have need of friends to stimulate us, we equally need someone to show us our errors.

~Chico Xavier

Do not be perturbed with by an ill-bred person; in most cases the one who is unsociable has a liver complaint and bad nerves.
