Don't confuse contentment with happiness.

~Chris Wooding

Cynicism was a one-way path, and once taken the way back was lost forever.

~Chris Wooding

Imagination is as close as we will ever be to godhead . . . for in imagination, we can create wonders.

~Chris Wooding

Things just seem so much better in theory than in practice.

~Chris Wooding

How was it that life never worked out the way it did in his head?

~Chris Wooding

Not for the first time, he wished he commanded a highly trained bunch of soldiers instead of a ragtag mob of rejects in varying stages of alcoholism.

~Chris Wooding

Some of us are born in the right place, and some of us have to go look for it.

~Chris Wooding

Once upon a time there was a young lady who lived in a marsh, and her name was Poison.

~Chris Wooding

"I just wanted them to die," said Poison. "They didn't have to make such a drama about it."

~Chris Wooding

But time has a way of stealthily deciding a person's mind without her conscious knowledge, and as she studied and procrastinated, Poison found one day that she had come to know her choice.

~Chris Wooding

On reflection,' Crake said to Frey, as they huddled behind an upturned table, "this wasn't one of your better plans.

~Chris Wooding

If there was one thing worse than being cheated, it was being cheated by someone who referred to themselves in the third person.
