Time constricts and flattens, you know. It's not evenly weighted. Certain moments linger in the mind and others disappear.

~Christina Baker Kline

So is it just human nature to believe that things happen for a reason - to find some shred of meaning even in the worst experiences?

~Christina Baker Kline

It's human nature to want to think the best of others, but if you listen carefully, people will always tell you who they are.

~Christina Baker Kline

You got to learn to take what people are willing to give.

~Christina Baker Kline

And so it is that you learn how to pass, if you're lucky, to look like everyone else, even though you're broken inside.

~Christina Baker Kline

I like the assumption that everyone is trying his best, and we should all just be kind to each other.

~Christina Baker Kline

One of the wonderful things about being a writer is that you're constantly dredging up some arcane knowledge or long-forgotten experience, rediscovering old passions and interests.

~Christina Baker Kline

I've come to think that's what heaven is- a place in the memory of others where our best selves live on.

~Christina Baker Kline

I never want to feel constrained by writing a novel for a specific audience.

~Christina Baker Kline

I have a lot of empathy for women who fit their writing into the crevices of their too-busy lives, as I once did.
