Time is strange. A moment can be as short as a breath, or as long as eternity.

~Cornell Woolrich

All guys are scared of each other, didn't you know that? I'm not the only one. We're all born afraid.

~Cornell Woolrich

You see, this would be a death by the imagination. And though the imagination feeds on phantoms, it needs a premise in reality to begin with. Then it can go on from there under its own power.

~Cornell Woolrich

It was as simple as that - they met. As simple as only beautiful things can be beautiful, as only life-changing things, turning-point things, can be simple. ("For The Rest Of Her Life")

~Cornell Woolrich

It's just some instinct as old as fear: you seek the dark when you hide, you seek the light when the need to hide is gone. All the animals have it too.

~Cornell Woolrich

I had that trapped feeling, like some sort of a poor insect that you've put inside a downturned glass, and it tries to climb up the sides, and it can't, and it can't, and it can't.
