I'm not the guy whose gonna shoot 10,000 free-throws until I'm Michael Jordan - and it did happen kind of accidentally that I said, "Okay, yeah, I'll try singing."

~D.A. Wallach

It's so much easier to use the default sounds in the synthesizers in Logic than it is to make your own thing or to learn how to play an instrument.

~D.A. Wallach

I'm the one driving the strategy and I'm an artist. What I've convinced the company to do is to just be totally open about exactly how everything works.

~D.A. Wallach

You don't have to forego education to do anything. Even if you want to go to the NBA, you should read.

~D.A. Wallach

If you want to be taken seriously, you almost have to act really serious.

~D.A. Wallach

I've always felt that singing is half technical, half taxing. You've got words, a melody, and an instrument, and you have to do justice to the words. You're just a medium for people to feel the song.

~D.A. Wallach

If you don't have an idea, you can defer to someone else. It's like having a baby with someone - it's not a clone of you, but it's partly you.

~D.A. Wallach

The more I make stuff, the more I become aware of when I feel like I'm making bullshit or feel like I'm making something I can stand behind.

~D.A. Wallach

To leverage those things that are common to everybody, and to present them in a way that's sort of naked, is more courageous in art than constantly trying to be evasively too cool.

~D.A. Wallach

You can't use irony as a way of disengaging with the difficult or emotional aspects of life.

~D.A. Wallach

I want the ethic of being independent and open-minded, having a lot of integrity, intellectually, to be part of anything I do.

~D.A. Wallach

I want to have freedom of thought and expression - not get beaten down into some corporate existence, where there's so much risk of embracing the truth that you feel like you can't do it.
