Mammals of every species indulge in play. Games are Nature's way of preparing us to face difficult realities.

~Daniel Suarez

In the vast game of Darwinian musical chairs, whenever the music stopped there were large numbers of people without a seatâ€”and some smartass had sold them guns.

~Daniel Suarez

My fiction is only just over the horizon. I present a world that's different but it's familiar enough that it freaks people out a little.

~Daniel Suarez

I suspect that democracy is not viable in a technologically advanced society. Free people wield too much ability to destroy.

~Daniel Suarez

We need to take a leaf out of nature's book. Any species that clones itself will eventually be attacked by a parasite, leading to an inevitable population crash.

~Daniel Suarez

When the survival strategy of a civilization is invalidated, in all of human history none have ever turned back from the brink.

~Daniel Suarez

Wealth aggregates and becomes political power. Simple as that. â€”Corporation' is just the most recent name for it.

~Daniel Suarez

Anything before you're thirty-five is new and exciting, and anything after that is proof the world's going to hell.

~Daniel Suarez

Fact and fiction carry the same intrinsic weight in the marketplace of ideas. Fortunately, reality has no advertising budget.

~Daniel Suarez

I have an English literature degree. I wanted to be the next great American novelist from a very early age, but I put it aside for a while, because I got very realistic at one point.

~Daniel Suarez

I don't have a Facebook page. I don't use Twitter. I don't give anyone a lot to grab onto. Sometimes, I even take out the battery of my mobile phone so that I can't be localized.

~Daniel Suarez

I wrote a piece of software in 1998 that created fictional weather.

~Daniel Suarez

Food is the very heart of freedom. How can people be free if they can't feed themselves without getting sued for patent violations?

~Daniel Suarez

I think technology is spreading, and I think ones experience of technology is going to relate increasingly to class - not so much to country.

~Daniel Suarez

I actually love technology. I worked for 18 years as systems analyst in technology.
