Idealism loses to pragmatism when it comes to winning elections.

~Danny Strong

I was a volleyball player as a kid. I played volleyball all the time.

~Danny Strong

I have absolutely no musical talent of my own!

~Danny Strong

I don't think there is anything more bitter in American politics than a close election.

~Danny Strong

I love the idea of a movie hero in a thriller who is able to get ahead by just his brilliance, and not with a gun or by being an action hero.

~Danny Strong

I've found that sitting around and obsessing about projects moving forward, when there's actually nothing I can do about it, at a certain point, is really counter-productive.

~Danny Strong

Usually if a scene's really hard to write, I just don't write it. Nothing's coming to mind.

~Danny Strong

Certainly, for me, and it's gone this way on every project I've worked on, the "writing" never ends until you're done with the movie.

~Danny Strong

The auditioning process is one in which the actor gets very little information about almost every element of it.

~Danny Strong

My goal isn't so much genre, or fact-based or not fact-based. I just want to work on projects that I think could be great.

~Danny Strong

In movies that tackle these political issues, there are far more interesting themes to be explored than partisan politics, which is what we get on cable news every second of every day.

~Danny Strong

Everything I've written up to now, hasn't had anything to do with my life really.

~Danny Strong

I wouldn't say I'm a political junkie. I follow it. I read a few articles every day.

~Danny Strong

People that work at the White House, they stay forever and love the job. Someone asked me, "Was there really a butler that was there for 40 years?" I said, "No, they're all there for 40 years."

~Danny Strong

I was alone a lot as a kid, because my parents were divorced.

~Danny Strong

To have a show have lawyers fighting civil rights cases week in and week out, I think it's exactly what we need.

~Danny Strong

I don't see myself directing things I don't write because, to me, directing was just an extension of the writing process.

~Danny Strong

I took a lot of writing courses.

~Danny Strong

It seems to me that our presidential elections have turned more into a popularity contest than a real analysis about who really should be President of the United States.

~Danny Strong

I think there are a lot more writers who are actors than you know; they just don't have roles on famous TV shows that you recognize.

~Danny Strong

I studied voice for about two years with an amazing coach, and I never rose above the level of mediocre.

~Danny Strong

I don't even know if people are familiar with my name as an actor. It's not as if I ever was an A¹/₄ber-famous actor.

~Danny Strong

I really want my career to be as an actor-writer-director-producer, you know? I don't know what will be stronger than the other.

~Danny Strong

I don't use my writing career as a vehicle to get me acting work or to write roles for myself.

~Danny Strong

I find that when people get a script, they know within five pages if the writer can write. Once you're five pages in, it doesn't matter whose name is on the cover, you're not even thinking about it.

~Danny Strong

I think I've had my fill of electoral law.

~Danny Strong

My strangest auditioning experience was when I was reading for a TV show, and right when I started the audition, the casting director left the room and yelled at me from the hallway to keep reading.

~Danny Strong

I read an interview with Aaron Sorkin and he said he plays every part when he's writing. I thought, "Oh, I do that too! I'm doing okay."
