There is no education system in the world - none at all - that's better than its average teacher.

~David Puttnam

If it's not true, don't say it; if it's not right, don't do it.

~David Puttnam

As intelligent and responsible filmmakers, working in a free society, we have a duty to ensure that our chosen medium is a force for good. Especially in this ever-more complex and difficult world.

~David Puttnam

My belief is that no movie, nothing in life, leaves people neutral. You either leave them up or you leave them down.

~David Puttnam

A vital step for the technology sector is to signpost legitimate search options far more clearly and to delete links to sites that promote illegally sourced content.

~David Puttnam

At its best, cinema does retain a remarkable ability to speak to people of every age, from every background, and in ways that almost any other art form in popular culture struggles to compete with.

~David Puttnam

A country that fails to value its teachers, fails to value its future.

~David Puttnam

At least in the West, politicians, corporations and media moguls can no longer take for granted their power to control the public discourse - and have it go unchallenged.

~David Puttnam

I've always sensed what a script should sound like - even before the movie's been made

~David Puttnam

What is certain is that plurality and diversity are not, and never can be, a natural 'byproduct' of unregulated market forces.

~David Puttnam

Most parliamentarians don't have a clue as regards the challenges or the opportunities the games industry faces.

~David Puttnam

I'm not naive enough to pretend that on its own cinema can capture the very soul of significant social and cultural problems.

~David Puttnam

Film and the other creative industries are being transformed by digital technologies.
