Wish it, believe it, and it will be so.

~Deborah Smith

A photograph is a souvenir of life!

~Deborah Smith

We are all bodies of water, guarding the mystery of our depths, but some of us have more to guard than others.

~Deborah Smith

Instead of fearing what might happen if I failed, I should be excited about what could happen if I succeeded!

~Deborah Smith

Happy people look young. You're really afraid of getting older, aren't you? You should only be afraid of getting less happy.

~Deborah Smith

I taught myself the first year course while I was on the dole, then moved to London to do an MA at SOAS, which led straight into a PhD.

~Deborah Smith

Flattery is a lie covered in a bed of flowery words.

~Deborah Smith

The LORD detests lying lips, but he delights in men who are truthful.
PROVERBS 12:22

~Deborah Smith

Plus, publishing's inherent conservatism, means that what little did get through was weighted towards the commercial end of the scale, which is not the kind of writing that excites me.

~Deborah Smith

The hardest memories are the pieces of what might have been.

~Deborah Smith

Life doesn't take itself seriously for long. Joy leaves an imprint even in the hardest sorrow.

~Deborah Smith

What do you call love, then?" Someone I can't live without.

~Deborah Smith

Our first-year list is Sangeeta Bandyopadhyay (translated by Arunava Sinha), Hwang Jung-eun (translated by Jung Yewon), and Khairani Barokka.
