Reading one book is like eating one potato chip.

~Diane Duane

There is a rule for fantasy writers: The more truth you mix in with a lie, the stronger it gets.

~Diane Duane

"Don't be afraid to make corrections," Picchu said. "Don't be afraid to lend a hand." She fell silent, seeming to think for a moment. "And don't look down."

~Diane Duane

But even in your world it's a byword. Men will fight bravely and be heroes, but for last-ditch defense against any oddsâ€¦ get a Mother.

~Diane Duane

Well, the rollout of new technology always affects how wizards do business.

~Diane Duane

The Spear in the Other's heart is the spear in your own: you are he.

~Diane Duane

What I try to do for my readers is to pass on some of the things that I found out about being thirteen after doing it for forty years.

~Diane Duane

A little science. A little magic. A little chicken soup.

~Diane Duane

It'd be a poor kind of world where there was just one explanation for things. ---Rhiow

~Diane Duane

A legend can just as well be founded in the future as in the past." "It's called a 'prophecy,'" Urruah said. "You may have heard of the concept.

~Diane Duane

Something always happens. You still have to promise stuff anyway. If you have to work to make the promises true... it's like a spell. You have to say the words every time you want the results.

~Diane Duane

You walk on water, and complain that you can't find anything to drink!

~Diane Duane

It's always been the children who have saved the universe from the previous generation and remade the universe in their own image.

~Diane Duane

My first generation of young readers now have not only children, but some of them have grandchildren to whom they're introducing their old passion.

~Diane Duane

And we will cause it to be well-made, this Sacrifice. You, young and never loving; I, old and never loved. Such a Song the Sea will never have seen.

~Diane Duane

I may have one more 'Star Trek' novel in me, but it would be in the old universe, not the new one.

~Diane Duane

All the drawing lacks is the final touch: To add eyes to the dragon

~Diane Duane

So rage, proud Power: fail again! And see my blood teach Death to die!

~Diane Duane

You do have the idea of being 'just good friends'? He gave her a sideways look. "For so high and honorable an estate," Roshaun said, "'just' seems a poor modifier to choose.

~Diane Duane

Those who don't know the mistakes of the past won't be able to enjoy it when they make them again in the future.

~Diane Duane

Sometimes we do not hear the Whisperer even at her loudest because she speaks in our own voice, the one we most often discount.

~Diane Duane

She tried to walk softly and wished the trees wouldn't stare at her so.

~Diane Duane

Doctors couldn't be everywhere, so the Lord invented Vulcans. I thought you knew.

~Diane Duane

Belief made no difference to the truth.

~Diane Duane

Honey, have you seen your sister? She's on Jupiter, Mom.

~Diane Duane

A warp," Nita whispered. "A tunnel through space-time. Are you a white hole?" It stopped bobbing, stared at her as if she had said something derogatory. (Do I look like a hole?)

~Diane Duane

Do it now and avoid the June rush! Fear death by water!

~Diane Duane

Dear Artificer, I've blown my quanta and gone to the Good Place!

~Diane Duane

Footsteps in the snow suggest where you have been, point to where you were going: but when they suddenly vanish, never dismiss the possibility of flight.

~Diane Duane

How am I supposed to save the universe with all this noise?!
