Settling, Cooks, Pain, Forget, Three, Taste, America, Auditions, Wife, Television*

I'm only stopped by people in uniform, whether it's customs people, janitors, or the FBI - they all watch The Wire. Sadly, beautiful, glamorous women don't know anything about it.

~Dominic West

I don't know why British actors are getting big parts in American TV shows. Maybe it's because we're cheap.

~Dominic West

I think I've got a funny face.

~Dominic West

Since I got married my wife doesn't really let me wear anything that I used to because she says I have no taste at all.

~Dominic West

I'm not a great fan of green screen. It's not much fun for actors. It's great for directors and technical people and cameramen.

~Dominic West

You've got to grab every opportunity that comes up.

~Dominic West

The kiss always gets a hell of a reaction.

~Dominic West

Even though I'm English, I've all my life been heavily exposed to American television and culture in general.

~Dominic West

I went to America to get away from constantly being cast in costume dramas, playing posh people.

~Dominic West

Apparently it'll all settle down and they'll forget about it soon.

~Dominic West

For a straight man, I seem to have to kiss an awful lot of men!

~Dominic West

Prince Charles is the best-dressed man in the world.

~Dominic West

People seem to think I'm Satan.

~Dominic West

No, I don't think 'The Wire' screwed up my career at all. It's the only reason people have heard of me. It's only been a huge, huge, very fortunate bonus.

~Dominic West

My mum's parents were from Ireland, my dad's mum was American-Irish.

~Dominic West

If you do an American TV series, before the audition you sign away the next five years of your life.

~Dominic West

I look ridiculous in a three-piece suit - I'm too fat.

~Dominic West

I'm a rather crude cook.

~Dominic West

I've always wanted to play more comic parts.
