Death is the only thing keeping us in line.

~Drew Magary

Thank God there's somebody that doesn't like Stuart Scott. I'm so happy!. It was nice to have that counter-balance to ESPN.

~Drew Magary

I took time in the day to write as much of the book as I possibly could. I didn't write too much at night, because I don't like to - I'd rather watch TV.

~Drew Magary

I had to be happy with the process of writing. Each step you take is more rewarding than the one before.

~Drew Magary

You cannot hide from the world. It will find you. It always does. And now it has found me. My split second of immortality is over. All that's left now is the end, which is all any of us ever has.

~Drew Magary

If you have a great characters, you can always have your character do nothing or do something stupid, and people will still follow them, because they're so real and so tangible.

~Drew Magary

I've hated cockroaches my entire life. Tweeting jokes about it helps me cope, in a way. I'm not as jumpy killing cave crickets as I used to be. I still jump plenty though.

~Drew Magary

I wanted to write a book that maybe had the potential to go beyond the Deadspin and KSK [Kissing Suzy Kolber] readership.

~Drew Magary

Once ESPN leaves you, and you don't have a foothold anywhere else, you're done. It's very hard to do anything else, because in some ways, they're the only game in town.

~Drew Magary

You're going to have Yahoo! and places that don't have rights being much more aggressive in how sports news is covered.

~Drew Magary

I occasionally get glimpses, but I have to reprioritize, because that's how it naturally progresses - things like family, responsibilities, and your job all take precedent.

~Drew Magary

With toilet books, people don't review them that much. They don't really pay much attention to them. It's just like, "Oh, okay. I'll put this in your stocking."

~Drew Magary

I know I still had to take money from my parents, because no one can afford to live in Manhattan, not even the rich people.

~Drew Magary

You need to be funny in a way that people feel like you're trying to make a deeper connection. So that's what I try to do.

~Drew Magary

You'll paint some nursery and the kid will want to sleep in a drawer.

~Drew Magary

It's a fact that every minute you hold a child, it triples in mass.

~Drew Magary

For every hour a mother gets to herself, a father will demand five times that amount for drinking with friends and acting like an immature dipshit.
