Martyrs have been sincere. And so have tyrants. Wise men have been sincere. And so have fools.

~E. Haldeman-Julius

Don't take our word for it. Read the Bible itself. Read the statements of preachers. And you will understand that God is the most desperate character, the worst villain in all fiction.

~E. Haldeman-Julius

A good title is a work of a genius!

~E. Haldeman-Julius

To be true to the mythical conception of a God is to be false to the interests of mankind.

~E. Haldeman-Julius

Theism tells men that they are the slaves of a God. Atheism assures men that they are the investigators and users of nature.

~E. Haldeman-Julius

To proclaim himself an agnostic, while to some it might appear more respectable and cautious, would be to say in effect that he hadn't decided what to believe.

~E. Haldeman-Julius

Why should an atheist pay more taxes so that a church which he despises should pay no taxes? That's a fair question. How can the apologists for the church exemption answer it?
