

Edward Burnett Tylor

Quotes

Mexico, Men, People, Valleys, Snow, Aztec, Built, Letters, Tribes, Wife, June, Humanity, Strong, Towns, Art, Littles, Race, Feet, Matter, Rocks

Everything that is really Mexican is either Aztec or Spanish.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

The interior of Mexico consists of a mass of volcanic rocks, thrust up to a great height above the sea-level.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

We are at last on the high lands of Mexico, the districts which at least three different races have chosen to settle in, neglecting the fertile country below.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

If you are a married man resident in Cuba, you cannot get a passport to go to the next town without your wife's permission in writing.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

The habit of building houses upon piles, which was first forced upon the people by the position they had chosen, was afterwards followed as a matter of taste, just as it is in Holland.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

The plateau of Mexico is 8,000 feet high, and that of Puebla 9,000 feet.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

At sunset we are rattling through the streets of the little town of Cordova.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

We were very kindly received by the English merchants to whom my companion had letters, and we set ourselves to learn what was the real state of things in Mexico.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

During the Tertiary period the whole valley of Mexico was one great lake.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

There was no romance about the mosquitos, however.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

There are even many huts built entirely of the universal aloe.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

I am afraid the Spanish American has not always a very strict regard for truth.

~Edward Burnett Tylor

Related Links:

- Mexico Quotes
- Men Quotes
- People Quotes
- Valleys Quotes
- Snow Quotes
- Aztec Quotes
- Built Quotes
- Letters Quotes
- Tribes Quotes
- Wife Quotes
- June Quotes
- Humanity Quotes
- Strong Quotes
- Towns Quotes
- Art Quotes
- Littles Quotes
- Race Quotes
- Feet Quotes
- Matter Quotes
- Rocks Quotes