Perhaps people ought to feel with more imagination.

~Elliot Perlman

You were trying to tell me something and I was trying to tell you something else. We didn't trust each other and that was reason enough to make each of us right.

~Elliot Perlman

Charisma will sustain a relationship only in the way that strong coffee first thing in the morning will sustain a career.

~Elliot Perlman

I hold him to my chest. My love for him is the only unequivocally good thing I know is always there inside of me. It is the reason I should be spared all that is coming, the only reason.

~Elliot Perlman

What else is life from the time you were born but a struggle to matter, at least to someone?

~Elliot Perlman

What is it about men that make women so lonely?

~Elliot Perlman

I used to be a child. It came naturally to me. I was an adult for a time, too. That came less naturally.

~Elliot Perlman

Hell is the special pain that dwells in that loss which you yourself have caused

~Elliot Perlman

[Memory] visits when it is hungry, not when you are.

~Elliot Perlman

As my name might suggest, I'm Jewish. My grandparents were Polish and Russian Jews who came to Australia in the late 1920s, and had they not, we wouldn't be talking now.

~Elliot Perlman

You would love the way he sees you. He uses you as a weapon against himself and not merely because you did

~Elliot Perlman

Being an insomniac only slows me down. I try not to write at night, as I'm concerned that this will affect the quality.
