Truth has many dimensions, and the way you arrive at truth in complex situations is through many perspectives.

~Eric Kandel

Memory is everything. Without it we are nothing.

~Eric Kandel

The brain is a complex biological organ of great computational capability that constructs our sensory experiences, regulates our thoughts and emotions, and control our actions.

~Eric Kandel

As you know, in most areas of science, there are long periods of beginning before we really make progress.

~Eric Kandel

I don't think biology is replacing the feeling experienced through art. Biology is capable of giving additional insights. It's a parallel, not a substitutive process.

~Eric Kandel

Life is sort of a circle. You come back to a lot of the interests that you had early in life.

~Eric Kandel

I see psychoanalysis, art and biology ultimately coming together, just like cognitive psychology and neuroscience have merged.

~Eric Kandel

It is this potential for plasticity of the relatively stereotyped units of the nervous system that endows each of us with our individuality.

~Eric Kandel

In art, as in science, reductionism does not trivialize our perception - of color, light, and perspective - but allows us to see each of these components in a new way.

~Eric Kandel

Not only Freud but artists and writers were also interested in the unconscious. It was medicine that made the first steps toward modernity.

~Eric Kandel

One of the wonderful things about Internet is its like a salon. It brings people together from different intellectual walks of life.

~Eric Kandel

Self-portraits are a way of revealing something about oneself.

~Eric Kandel

I went to medical school after having decided to do so somewhere between my junior and senior year at Harvard - very late. I initially wanted to be an intellectual historian.
