Belief in God is an act of faith. But so is believing our existence is simply the result of chance.

~Eric Metaxas

Christianity contains within itself a germ hostile to the Church (Dietrich Bonhoeffer)

~Eric Metaxas

It was not apathy or passiveness. For him, prayer was a display of the strongest possible activity.

~Eric Metaxas

Religion is the most fragile of all freedoms. And that's because it is the most threatening to those in power.

~Eric Metaxas

True faith is not a leap into the dark; it's a leap into the light

~Eric Metaxas

Ideas have far-reaching consequences, and one must be ever so careful about what one allows to lodge in one's brain.

~Eric Metaxas

Jesus was and is the enemy of dead religion.

~Eric Metaxas

With the tools of democracy, democracy was murdered and lawlessness made "legal." Raw power ruled, and its only real goal was to destroy all other powers besides itself.

~Eric Metaxas

It's so easy to become a grumbler, someone who condemns and carps at everything on principle and sees an ulterior motive behind it.

~Eric Metaxas

He did not hope that God heard his prayers; he knew it.

~Eric Metaxas

Bonhoeffer thought of death as the last station on the road to freedom.

~Eric Metaxas

If God is God, he is the God of reality and facts and science and history.

~Eric Metaxas

We've gone all the way from foolishly accepting authority to foolishly rejecting all authority.

~Eric Metaxas

The worlds of folklore and religion were so mingled in early twentieth century German culture that even families who didn't go to church were often deeply Christian.

~Eric Metaxas

There was only one reality, and Christ was Lord over all of it, or none.

~Eric Metaxas

Atheism tells him what he isn't, and like all of us he yearns to know what he is.

~Eric Metaxas

Today, Wilberforce University welcomes many of America's poorest and most underserved populations and transforms their educational dreams into realities.

~Eric Metaxas

Glory, glory, said the Bee, Hallelujah, said the Flea. Praise the Lord, remarked the Wren. At springtime all is born-again.

~Eric Metaxas

The 'success' of the sermon is utterly dependent on the God who breaks through and 'grasps' us, or we cannot be 'grasped.'

~Eric Metaxas
