I am an anarch - not because I despise authority, but because I need it. Likewise, I am not a nonbeliever, but a man who demands something worth believing in.

~Ernst Junger

It has always been my ideal in war to eliminate all feelings of hatred and to treat my enemy as an enemy only in battle and to honour him as a man according to his courage.

~Ernst Junger

Habent sua fata libelli et balli [Books and bullets have their own destinies]

~Ernst Junger

In my experience, I have found that creativity demands a vigilant mind, which is weakened by the influence of drugs.

~Ernst Junger

The special trait making me an anarch is that I live in a world which I â€™ ultimately' do not take seriously. This increases my freedom; I serve as a temporary volunteer

~Ernst Junger

The anarch wages his own wars, even when marching in rank and file

~Ernst Junger

We do not escape our boundaries or our innermost being. We do not change. It is true we may be transformed, but we always walk within our boundaries, within the marked-off circle.

~Ernst Junger

The anarch knows the rules. He has studied them as a historian and goes along with them as a contemporary. Wherever possible, he plays his own game within their framework; this makes the fewest waves.

~Ernst Junger

Liberalism is to freedom as anarchism is to anarchy.
