There comes a point when a dream becomes reality and reality becomes a dream.

~Frances Farmer

I minded my own business, and, unfortunately, so did everyone else.

~Frances Farmer

If a person is treated like a patient, they are apt to act like one.

~Frances Farmer

I miss the comfort in being sad.

~Frances Farmer

The more people pointed at me in scorn the more stubborn I got and when they began calling me the Bad Girl of West Seattle High, I tried to live up to it.

~Frances Farmer

Have you ever had a broken heart?

~Frances Farmer

I went to Sunday School and liked the stories about Christ and the Christmas star. They were beautiful. They made you warm and happy to think about. But I didn't believe them.

~Frances Farmer

I have learned that to have a good friend is the purest of all God's gifts, for it is a love that has no exchange of payment.

~Frances Farmer

If you get old fashioned enough, you'll always be in style.

~Frances Farmer

I wondered a little why God was such a useless thing. It seemed a waste of time to have him. After that he became less and less, until he was... nothingness.

~Frances Farmer

But I was sure of one thing. If God were a father, with children, that cleanliness I had been feeling wasn't God.

~Frances Farmer

I just knew that God wasn't there. He was a man on a throne in Heaven, so he was easy to forget.

~Frances Farmer

That satisfied me until I began to figure that if God loved all his children equally, why did he bother about my red hat and let other people lose their fathers and mothers for always?

~Frances Farmer
