Part of the down-to-earthness that made the pioneers succeed was expressed in a sentence: It takes pretty good [people] to get along with water ditches in a dry time, and not quarrel.

~George A. Smith

Happiness, contentment, the health and growth of the soul, depend, as men have proved over and over again, upon some simple issue, some single turning of the soul.

~George A. Smith

Power and position often make a man trifle with the truth.

~George A. Smith

We must seek the loving-kindness of God in all the breadth and open-air of common life.

~George A. Smith

The heart which finds life in material wealth is usually certain to go farther and seek for more in the satisfaction of base and sullen appetites.

~George A. Smith

Lives are changed by a moment's listening to conscience, by a single and quiet inclination of the mind.

~George A. Smith

Into every soul, however purged and fenced, evil appears to have as much freedom of entrance as God Himself.

~George A. Smith

Let those who, still in their youth, have preserved their faith and fullness of hope, keep looking up.

~George A. Smith

If we have a heart for the magnitudes of life, it will not seem vain to believe that God Himself should guard it.

~George A. Smith

Man does find in Nature deliverance from himself, oblivion of his past, with peace and purity!

~George A. Smith

Jesus Christ tells us that a man cannot be wrong if he argues towards God from what he finds best in himself.

~George A. Smith

There is no truth which the prophets press more steadily upon Israel than that all their national life lies in the sight and on the care of God.
