

George H. Smith Quotes

*Religion, Atheism, Christian, Men, Mean, Christianity, Wish, Thinking, Ideas, Sacrifice, Belief, Burden Of Proof, Strong, Commitment, Human Life,
Philosophy, Utterance, Conformity, Spring, Way*

Atheism is the absence of a belief in a god, nothing more. If the theist wishes to draw monumental implications from this lack of belief, he must argue for his claims.

~George H. Smith

The theist must present an intelligible description of god. Until he does so, god makes no more sense than unie; both are cognitively empty, and any attempt at proof is logically absurd.

~George H. Smith

One can be committed to conformity or one can be committed to truth, but not both.

~George H. Smith

Christianity has nothing to offer a happy man living in a natural, intelligible universe.

~George H. Smith

Just as Christianity must destroy reason before it can introduce faith, so it must destroy happiness before it can introduce salvation.

~George H. Smith

It is my firm conviction that man has nothing to gain, emotionally or otherwise, by adhering to a falsehood, regardless of how comfortable or sacred that falsehood may appear.

~George H. Smith

To advocate irrationality is to advocate that which is destructive to human life.

~George H. Smith

Related Links:

- Religion Quotes
- Atheism Quotes
- Christian Quotes
- Men Quotes
- Mean Quotes
- Christianity Quotes
- Wish Quotes
- Thinking Quotes
- Ideas Quotes
- Sacrifice Quotes
- Belief Quotes
- Burden Of Proof Quotes
- Strong Quotes
- Commitment Quotes
- Human Life Quotes
- Philosophy Quotes
- Utterance Quotes
- Conformity Quotes
- Spring Quotes
- Way Quotes