There's never any reason to trust someone. If there's a reason, then it's not trust. -Terence

~Gerald Morris

I take it that he is more than just a woodcutter. "No one is just a woodcutter, " replied Terence. "A person's always more than his present occupation.

~Gerald Morris

I have this recurring nightmare where I'm lost in a strange forest, and my only hope is your sense of direction. Enough to give a fellow the sweats, it is.

~Gerald Morris

He expects us to kill him," Palomides said to Dinadan. "Some people are so demanding," Dinadan replied. "Considering we've only just met, I mean.

~Gerald Morris

How did they know that I was the one who saved them?" "They don't. You're the third knight they've celebrated over since it happened.

~Gerald Morris

They've named the well after you." "How did they know my name?" "They don't. They invented one.

~Gerald Morris

Whatever you seize for yourself is worthless. Only what is given you has value.

~Gerald Morris

Which do you hate more: breaking your word or dying?" "I don't know. I've never done either.

~Gerald Morris

Very well. I shall try to think like an idiot.

~Gerald Morris

Lynet scowled. "I'm just so tired of young knights wearing their father's armor and dreaming romantic dreams riding up to their death.

~Gerald Morris

Brave? Or stupid?" Roger shrugged. "I've never been quite sure where brave stopped and stupid began, myself.
