One of the things I've learned by working on the 'Walking Dead' and other TV shows is to be more tolerant of other people's process.

~Glen Mazzara

If you're going to run a small business, you need to know what everyone is doing, be the first one in and the last one out, and work weekends.

~Glen Mazzara

It's better to grow your employees, steer them into a place that they can learn and succeed, and want to work hard and be loyal, than to have a revolving door of employees. That's demoralizing.

~Glen Mazzara

Sharing information with employees makes them feel invested.

~Glen Mazzara

Nobody can survive alone, in this world. People have bonds, and sometimes those bonds are broken. And then, that person goes spinning off and connects with someone else.

~Glen Mazzara

I usually dive head first and am really excited about that changes.

~Glen Mazzara

When you're managing an emergency department, you're trying to keep everybody calm, so when an emergency comes in the door, everyone can do their best work.

~Glen Mazzara

I think horror films always have to be as simple as possible.

~Glen Mazzara

The key things I learned as a hospital administrator are to be organized, communicate, and be flexible.

~Glen Mazzara

Don't forget, I've been fired by studios; I'm not the studio's guy. I'm a guy who can work with studios, but if you ask any studio, I stand up to these people.

~Glen Mazzara

I went to NYU undergraduate, then for a Master's in English, and got a summer job at St. Vincent's. I was a ward clerk handling everything in an intensive care unit.

~Glen Mazzara

That's the holy grail as a TV writer, to work on a story that you care about and to put it out there and for it to find the audience and connect with fans and connect with critics.
