We must explain the truth: There is no free lunch.

~Grace Napolitano

We must take the time to do what needs to be done now, what is right, instead of passing a bad bill.

~Grace Napolitano

President Bush has consistently used rhetoric, and that is not convincing given his past record.

~Grace Napolitano

To allow all U.S. workers to put part of their earnings into private investment accounts would definitely erode the Social Security system and cause uncertainty for new investors.

~Grace Napolitano

A Congressional Budget Office report released as recent as June 2004 says the system will be able to pay full benefits until 2052, and 80 percent after that.

~Grace Napolitano

Our political leaders must be honest and forthcoming with data that will allow citizens to use facts and figures to judge for themselves what state Social Security is in.

~Grace Napolitano

The president's claim that Social Security is going broke is misleading at best. The sky is not falling, although there is no doubt that the system needs to be strengthened.

~Grace Napolitano

If Congress doesn't raise taxes, you cannot get a private investment account without forgoing a portion, possibly all, of your guaranteed benefit check.

~Grace Napolitano

There is a need for Social Security reform to ensure its stability, and Congress must act.

~Grace Napolitano

Social Security has been effective for 70 years; prior predictions of its demise have been totally overstated.

~Grace Napolitano

Almost half of all Latinas currently on Social Security rely exclusively on their benefit check in retirement.

~Grace Napolitano

Latinos are disproportionately more likely to be injured on the job than other ethnic groups.

~Grace Napolitano

Our Hispanic community needs to understand how important the Social Security system is for not only its retired citizens, but also its disabled workers.

~Grace Napolitano

Even without reforms, the Social Security fund will be able to meet 100 percent of its obligations until 2042.

~Grace Napolitano

I am not criticizing investing in the stock market; I am an investor.
