When television came in, everybody thought that was the end of the movie business, which was not and is not.

~Henry Blodget

It's all about who your team is and who your people are.

~Henry Blodget

Arrogance follows distribution strength.

~Henry Blodget

People have been predicting the death of television for 20 years now, and so far it's been entirely wrong. But it does seem viewership habits are starting to change.

~Henry Blodget

There's too much bad. The worst is mediocre. Bad is easy. There's high quality, there's pornography, and then there's bad.

~Henry Blodget

Digital advertising is now larger than TV.

~Henry Blodget

Almost any show that has reviewers behind it, Rotten Tomatoes behind it, will find a way to survive.

~Henry Blodget

My mission is to figure out the journalistic model for the digital medium, finding out how we get the right stories readers want, at the right time and wherever they want to read them.

~Henry Blodget

In the new world of digital, there are no must-read publications any more.

~Henry Blodget

The tech folks have seen WiFi as the way to untether. And what better reason to untether than entertainment content? So there's nobody better positioned than the in-home Wi-Fi purveyor.

~Henry Blodget

You have to have a business model you believe in and like.

~Henry Blodget

Some things go slow, slow, slow, and then - wham! - they're over.

~Henry Blodget

The first reaction is, get defensive. Second reaction is, what are we going to do about it?

~Henry Blodget

It's very hard to be good. It is self-destructive thinking to think that there is too much good.

~Henry Blodget

Television is not hurting. Television is in fantastic shape. It's just a golden age for other people.

~Henry Blodget

I'm no expert in vibrators, but I was surprised to learn that one could fit in that little box.

~Henry Blodget

Some people have made a fortune by being employed. Jerry Bruckheimer does not own his content. Warner Bros. owns his shows. They are on CBS, and he makes a fortune.

~Henry Blodget

[T]here's a difference between confident leadership and empty-headed delusion or cheerleading. And this is a difference that many CEOs miss.
