It's hard to know now who, if anyone, in the media has any credibility.

~Howard Fineman

Gov. Scott Walker, a Tea Party-tinged Republican, is the advance guard of a new GOP push to dismantle public-sector unions as an electoral force.

~Howard Fineman

A purely objective viewpoint does not exist in the cosmos or in politics.

~Howard Fineman

The crusades of Vietnam and Watergate seemed like a good idea at the time, even a noble one, not only to the press but perhaps to a majority of Americans.

~Howard Fineman

A political party is dying before our eyes-and I don't mean the Democrats. I'm talking about the mainstream media, which is being destroyed by the opposition.

~Howard Fineman

When Americans invade Iraq, Bush says, we will be greeted as liberators by the Iraqi people, proving that taking out Saddam Hussein was the right thing to do.

~Howard Fineman

The notion of a neutral, mainstream national media gained dominance only in World War II and in its aftermath, when what turned out to be a temporary moderate consensus came to govern the country.

~Howard Fineman

There's a very healthy tradition in America of skepticism of centralized power. If we ever lose the skepticism of centralized power, we'll lose the essence of the country.

~Howard Fineman

Do you see Jesus Christ as the son of God and believe in him as the route to salvation and eternal life?

~Howard Fineman

We have had too much of the Clintons, too much of the establishment, too much of Bushes. We have had too much of the old names and the old theories. It's time for a new theory.

~Howard Fineman

If you look at the top ten most reliable cars, as reported by thousands of people in all kinds of independent testing, there's only one American car in the top ten. It's the Buick.

~Howard Fineman

To get elected as a Democrat, it's hard to be from the city. It's hard to be a graduate of Duke University.
