~Ian McLeod

If you really want to make a difference for the customer, so what you have got to do is to make sure the products that you're bringing down in price are ones that they are buying every day.

~Ian McLeod

In comedy, it's very, very important to be able to open up so that people feel they're included.

~Ian McLeod

Quite often I play roles that require quite a degree of emotional exposure, and they can be very difficult to do.

~Ian McLeod

I'm responsible for a hundred thousand people across Australia as well and I want to keep them gainfully employed. I want to give them opportunity to grow, I want to give them opportunity to develop.

~Ian McLeod

Having a situation where you have got in conflict with your suppliers all the time is not a great place to be.

~Ian McLeod

I've worked for more than 50 years on the stage and I have played great, great, great roles, but I haven't played a great Shakespearean role because they're all male. I'm actually very proud of it.

~Ian McLeod

In some roles you do get into a mode of terror. It's always very frightening - the first audiences are frightening.

~Ian McLeod

You don't like to have people believing that you're doing the wrong thing which is why we're trying to make sure that people recognise that we do the right thing.

~Ian McLeod

The country has to change. Productivity in Australia more generally has got to improve. Some of the highest manufacturing costs in the world are coming out of Australia.

~Ian McLeod

I think it's very important for Arts Ministers to purchase art, to attend art, to validate art.
