I walked past Noel Gallagher on the street once and everyone was like, "Go speak to him! He's one of your heroes!" I thought I'd leave him. I don't know what I'd say to him.

~Iwan Rheon

When you write a song, there's no point keeping it to yourself.

~Iwan Rheon

I think drama school really teaches you how to announce; you're conscious that people might not understand you if you speak too fast and too Welsh.

~Iwan Rheon

I'm still secretly a bit of a punk. Love The Clash and a bit of the Pistols. I guess as I've got older I've chilled out a bit. But, my teenage angst is still stirring somewhere!

~Iwan Rheon

The music is mine. There's nothing to hide behind. That's where you see the real person.

~Iwan Rheon

It's a weird thing with accents. When I go home it gets a lot stronger, when I've had a few beers it gets a lot stronger.

~Iwan Rheon

When you're doing the same scene over and over, all day long, you need to keep your levels up for your own performance and for the other actors.

~Iwan Rheon

I was a huge Radiohead fan growing up.

~Iwan Rheon

I just want my music to be put out there, not shoved in peoples faces. I want to keep it relaxed.

~Iwan Rheon

I have no ambitions to be a pop star.

~Iwan Rheon

There was so much great music around in the 60s, stuff like The Small Faces, but I also love The Jam.
