Everybody is a football senator for a while, but it is a much shorter season and there are not that many teams that are on top, and baseball is just built into the American psyche.

~Jay Rockefeller

There is unmistakable evidence that Saddam Hussein is working aggressively to develop nuclear weapons and will likely have nuclear weapons within the next five years, and he could have it earlier.

~Jay Rockefeller

We will push through health care reform regardless of the views of the American people.

~Jay Rockefeller

Everything is about accountability to the American people, accountability of the executive branch ... [and] accountability of the oversight of the Congress.

~Jay Rockefeller

The Republicans, in the various arguments, repeat exactly the same phrases one after another, with no sense of embarrassment, no sense of shame, no sense of intellectual integrity.

~Jay Rockefeller

I don't think so, and that's partly the problem of not checking cargo, and it's partly the problem of biological weapons, which nobody has figured out really what to do about yet.

~Jay Rockefeller

One year after the United States led the invasion of Iraq, the country remains extremely dangerous not only to our troops, but also to the stability of the world.

~Jay Rockefeller

Iran is nothing but trouble, and always has been that.

~Jay Rockefeller

Allowing the U.N. into Iraq will demonstrate to the Iraqis that the international community as a whole is committed to bringing stability and safety to their country.

~Jay Rockefeller

There is a difference between being a political force, or a political apparent force or a potential force, and between a real discourse or a real argument.

~Jay Rockefeller

What is private and what is discussed behind closed doors, you do not have to be instructed at the age of fifty or sixty or forty or whatever to not talk about it outside.

~Jay Rockefeller

The reason I love being a senator is that I can have whatever thoughts I have, say whatever I want about any subject at any time, and that is a wonderful feeling of freedom, and I cherish that.

~Jay Rockefeller
