Never regret. If it's good, it's wonderful. If it's bad, it's experience.

~Jean Plaidy

It is the people who have no say in making wars who suffer from the consequences of them.

~Jean Plaidy

It's not how many years you've lived, it's how they've left you.

~Jean Plaidy

There's nothing makes you admire people like seeing yourself in them.

~Jean Plaidy

Tea! The English could always be pacified with it!

~Jean Plaidy

Happiness don't ask to see who you be afore her sits down at your table. 'Er comes and sits with them as know how to welcome her and keep her the willing guest.

~Jean Plaidy

It is to live that requires courage, not to die.

~Jean Plaidy

Gentlemen, if my love for you equaled my ignorance of everything concerning you, it would indeed be unbounded.

~Jean Plaidy

I really believe there are some people who hate to contemplate the happiness of others.

~Jean Plaidy

I've always thought you've got to believe in luck to get it.

~Jean Plaidy

I found that married life gave me the necessary freedom to follow an ambition which had been with me since childhood; and so I started to write in earnest.

~Jean Plaidy

People always grumbled. If things went well they wanted them to go better. Give them comfort and they wanted luxuries.

~Jean Plaidy

But our lives were not as they seemed, were they, Sophia? No one's life ever is.

~Jean Plaidy

I was always amused by the prayers of the saintly. "God do this, God don't do that." I thought God probably laughed at them too, unless He was a little annoyed by their temerity.

~Jean Plaidy

How stupid lovers can be! But if they were not, there would be no story.

~Jean Plaidy
